October 12, 1752. THE Numb. 92.

VIRGINIA GAZETTE.

With the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtic.

LISBON, May 1.

BY an Expreſs from Rome there is Advice, that the Pope, at the Interceſſion of his Majeſty, has conſented to ſuppreſs the annual Proceſſion of the INQUISITION, entitled The Act of Faith, in which ſuch unhappy Perſons as were accuſed of Witchcraft or Judaiſm, uſed to be made a publick Spectacle. His Holineſs has alſo mitigated ſeveral other Proceedings of the Inquiſition which were looked upon to be too ſevere.

Ratiſbon, May 22. The Affair of Eaſt-Frieſland makes a great Noiſe in the Dyet; the King of Great-Britain, as Elector of Hanover, having deſired that it ſhould be taken into Conſideration, the Diet has for ſome Days paſt proceeded thereupon. The Miniſter of Brandebourg, pretending that this Affair ſhould have been previouſly communicated to him, has made a very ſtrong Proteſt againſt the Diet's Proceeding: The Conſequence of this Affair fixes the Attention of the Publick.

Hanover, May 23. The Miniſter of this Electorate at Ratiſbon has ſent to the Miniſtry an Account of what has paſſed in Relation to the Affair of Eaſt-Frieſland, with the Proteſt of the Miniſter from Brandebourg; whereupon Orders have been diſpatched to that Miniſter, how to further conduct himſelf in the Purſuit of that important Affair.

Copenhagen, May 12. His Daniſh Majeſty has cauſed a Placard to be publiſhed, declaring that he had by his Plenipotentiaries concluded a Treaty of Amity between him and the Regency of Tunis and Tripoli, whereby all Ships and Veſſels of each Country may paſs freely.

Venice, May 13. Thurſday the Doge, accompanied by ſeveral of the Nobility, went with the uſual Ceremony on Board a Veſſel called the Bucentaur, and married the Sea of Adria according to annual Cuſtom, in Commemoration of a Signal Victory obtain'd by the Venetians over the Turks in 1674; on this Occaſion the Doge caſt the Nuptial Ring into the Sea, and afterwards entertained the Nobility, &c. at Dinner.

Extract of a Letter from the Hague, May 10.

"They write from Cologne, that the whole Empire is attentive to what paſſes at Hanover during the Reſidence there of his Britannick Majeſty, whom long Experience has made acquainted with every Thing that can contribute to maintain the Tranquillity of Europe, and who will, it's not doubted, put the moſt proper Methods in Practice to ſecure the Poſſeſſion of that precious Treaſure, the effecting of which that auguſt Monarch has greatly at Heart.

"Our laſt Letters from Bonn adviſe, that the Elector of Cologn is returned in good Health; that Count Wartenſleben, who had no Proſpect of ſucceeding in his Negociation with that Prince, ſtaid behind at Munich, in Order to attend the Elector Palatine, by whom this Lord is favourably regarded, to try if he could ſucceed better with him; but it's much doubted, theſe Letters add, with all his Dexterity, and the Eſteem which his Serene Electoral Highneſs has for his Perſon, whether he will be better able to engage the Palatine Court to reliſh a Treaty of Subſidy with the Maritime Powers, than he has been to induce the Elector of Cologn to enter into one; that the Priſons of the City of Cologn continue to be filled with People of various Ranks; and that his Perquiſition was the more neceſſary, as the blackeſt Crimes were every Day committed there with Impunity.

"Though the States of Holland have been fully employed, during their laſt Seſſion, with Military Affairs, as well as thoſe of Commerce, yet no favourable Reſolution has been taken by them thereupon, ſuch a Diſagreement of Sentiments prevail in that Aſſembly. Some People think that they will follow the Example of ſome of the Provinces, which have made Remonſtrances againſt the incorporating of ſeveral Regiments; a Scheme that has been unanimouſly approved by the States General, and the Council of State, the Members whereof have no private Intereſt to manage in this Affair; but among the States of the other Provinces the Caſe is very different, every Magiſtrate of the City, every Member of the Nobleſſe, has Brothers, Nephews, Couſins, &c. who fall within the Reform, and which is the prime Cauſe of Remonſtrances from Frieſland, Guelderland. and Zealand. As Holland, however, will be greatly benefitted by the Saving which will be made by this incorporating, there are others who flatter themſelves that their Noble and Great Mightineſſes will ſupport the good Intentions of his Royal Highneſs, whoſe Prudence and Steadineſs meets with, at leaſt, as much Oppoſition as the good Intentions of the late Stadtholder. The Deputies of the Admiralty are alſo buſy in deliberating upon the Project of a free Port, and there is great Reaſon to apprehend, that they will take a negative Reſolution, under Pretence that nothing is pointed out to indemnify them for the Loſs that their Finances will ſuſtain by this Eſtabliſhment. The Deputations to theſe Colleges were heretofore very lucrative, but now, as they have an Inſpector who repreſents the Stadtholder, they have not an Opportunity of lining their Purſes as they uſed to do, which puts them much out of Humour."

From the GENERAL EVENING POST.

While the Gazettes of almoſt all the Countries in Europe are big with important Negociations, extraordinary Conſultations, or immenſe Preparations; which excite Wonder, Attention, or Surprize! the News-Papers of Great-Britain, and more eſpecially the beſt authorized, are as ſilent as if nothing was done or expected. Vauxhall and Ranelagh are the great Scenes of Action. A Maſquerade is an Affair of great Concern; the laſt Intrigue of an Actreſs is Matter of general Enquiry; a matrimonial Quarrel makes more Noiſe than the ſtealing the French Marquis; and, in ſhort, Politicks have ſo entirely given Way to Pleaſure, and a genteel Taſte has ſo effectually rooted out that old-faſhion'd Humour, Application, as to baniſh from amongſt polite People all other Buſineſs than——pure Amuſement.

POLITICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Among other good or bad Things, for which Europe is indebted to Louis XIV. we may reckon that of employing more Men in the Wars than ſerved the Turn in former Times. After the Feodal Service was laid aſide, Wars were carried on with a Handful of Men, in Compariſon to the numerous Armies brought in the Field within theſe 80 Years. In the Year 1672, that Monarch had encreaſed his Forces to 180,000 Regular Troops: This put his Enemies upon oppoſing him with equal Forces; and as his Ambition in Proceſs of Time created him more Adverſaries, he was neceſſitated to redouble his Efforts, ſo that at laſt he had 450,000 Men in Arms, including the Marine; and his Enemies were forced to maintain at leaſt as many amongſt them all.

To ſupport the additional Expences incurr'd by this new Method of waging War, all Nations have applied themſelves to Commerce with greater Aſſiduity and Induſtry; and when the Riches flowing in upon them through that Channel as alſo their natural Reſourſes have both proved deficient, they have had Recourſe to Loans, anticipated the Funds, mortgaged the Taxes, &c. and ſo after fighting one another over Head and Ears in Debt, they put an End to the Fray by Treaties of perpetual Peace, ſit down to caſt up their Accompts, and conſult with ſkilful Algebraiſts in how many Years they ſhall be able to pay off all old Scores, both Principal and Intereſt.

But it unluckily happens, that theſe Neceſſities and Incumbrances, which are a Spur to Induſtry, and keep them ſteady in the Proſecution of Commerical Schemes, in Order to retrieve their Affairs, occaſion freſh Diſputes, and lay the Foundation of new Wars. Jealouſies ariſe about Commerce: Towns and Provinces are not now reckoned worth quarreling about, except only on Account of their being conveniently ſituated for Trade: Hence the tedious Negociations at Paris relating to Limits in America, the Wrangling at Madrid about the Courſe Ships ſhould hold in the Weſt-Indian-Seas, and the Jarring at Ratiſbon about a Province in which a new Eaſt-India Company has been ſet up. Thus they dance continually in a Circle, run up freſh Scores before the old ones are cleared, and ſo are never out of Debt.

LONDON,

May 16. The following is the Copy of the Anſwer made to M. Michel, Secretary of Legation from Pruſſia, to the Declaration which he verbally made to the Miniſtry upon the Subject of a new Eſtabliſhment of an Aſiatick Company at Embden. "There is no Doubt to be made, but that "every Nation may trafick in any Part of the World where the Ports are "open to all Nations, and where there is no Privilege excluſive of Com-"merce; and a kind Reception in ſuch Ports is never refuſed to the Ships "of Friends, when they only enter to get Refreſhments, or to take Shelter "from the Diſaſters of the Sea, and abſolutely abſtain from all Kinds of "Commerce whilſt they remain there. But as it is notorious, that, by the "Laws of the Kingdom, the Engliſh India Company has a Privilege of "Commerce to the Indies, excluſive of all other Subjects of the King "who are not employed by the ſaid Company, and that it conſequently "hath the Right of ſeizing all Britiſh Subjects who ſhall trade thither "without its Conſent: His Majeſty therefore finds himſelf obliged to "maintain the Company in its Rights, in Reſpect to the Britiſh Subjects "employed in the Eaſt-Indies, by what foreign Power ſoever, without "Diſtinction or Exception, which is not leſs conformable to the Law of "Nations than to the particular Laws of the Kingdom."

May 19. Before the Court of King's Bench a Cauſe will ſoon come on, in which a private Soldier is Plaintiff, and his Officer Defendant; the Action is brought againſt the Officer for beating him. A Quarrel one Day happened, when the Officer in Rage fell upon him ſeverely, which the Fellow reſented, not by returning Blows, but by preventing the Officer from ſtriking by holding his Hands: The poor Fellow was tried by a Court Martial, and received a great Number of Laſhes, but having ſome Friends to eſpouſe his Intereſt, the Fellow has applied to a Court of Juſtice, where it is thought he will recover very great Damages; for there is no Law, whether Civil or Military, that can warrant any Man, of whatever Station, to ſtrike another with Impunity.

Yeſterday one Elizabeth Scott, ſwore the Peace againſt her Huſband before Mr. Juſtice Fielding, and gave the following Reaſons, viz. Sir, he has mortified me all over, and I goes in Danger of my Life, Night and Day. I have bore him nine Children, and whereof I am ſure I would not make my Affidavy to any Thing that was falſe for the whole World; but I can ſafely take my Affidavy that he has mortified me from Head to Foot, and ſo he has my Child too. Whereof I could ſhew your Worſhip, if your Worſhip was a Woman; but to be ſure our Sex's Modeſty can't go as far, that is, whereby before Men, to be ſure your Worſhip however underſtands me very well; and I hope;

Thefts, you shall be hang'd alive and send him to Jayl; which however, as every Word of the foregoing, appeared to be false, was not done, but they were both dismiss'd; and the Accuser severely reprimanded. One of the Neighbours, a very credible Person, swore, that he believed, there was not a better Husband, nor a worse Wife in the King's Dominions.

Last Week two Gentlemen of Distinction were put under an Arrest, on Account of a Challenge one gave the other to fight a Duel; the Cause of their Quarrel was a Woman: One had been detected in an Intrigue with the other's Mistress; a Crime which Men of Gallantry it seems think it worth their while to revenge by Death.

Last Saturday Thomas Jones, by Trade a Taylor, but by Profession a Cheat, more celebrated than even Stroud himself, was convicted upon two Indictments, the first for defrauding Messr. Louth and Pitts, Mercers, in Pater-noster Row, of two Pieces of Allapene, by producing a false Token, and pretending he came from Mr. Eccles, a Master-Taylor in Norfolk; and the other for defrauding Mr. Depoty Nath. Wollen-Draper, in St. Paul's Churchyard, of a large Quantity of Cloth, by personating to his Servant, and pretending to be, Mr. Evan Price, a Master-Taylor near Red-Lion Square. His Sentence was, six Months Imprisonment in Newgate, to stand in the Pillory at the West-End of Cheapside, and from thence to be whipt round the South-side of St. Paul's, as far as Ludgate-street. Stroud has not appeared in more Characters or Dresses than this ingenious Cheat, who frequently in the very Week in which he has appeared upon the Shop Board, as a Journeyman Taylor, has made his Appearance at Court, and other publick Places, as a fine Gentleman.

May 21. We hear from Dublin, that a Personage of great Distinction in the British Nation has lately suffered an Amputation of both his Ears, by a Gentleman on whom he had the Impudence, as well as the enormous Baseness, to attempt the Commission of Sodomy; and indeed it is Pity that some other of his Members had not undergone the same Fate.

May 25. A Girl who had for some Time past been obliged to the Generosity of a married Person of Eminence, who went under a feign'd Name to her, and had also contracted Matrimony with her, was about a Month since taken very ill: An Apothecary attended her, by whose Care she soon began to recover, and remained pretty well for a few Days: But in a short Time she relapsed into a dangerous Condition: Medicines were administred to her by the Apothecary, which had no Effect: He was greatly surprized at this, and told her that she had certainly taken something to counteract the Virtues of what had been given her, which she solemnly denied, and last Week died in the greatest Agony. In one of her Pockets was found a Letter from her pretended Friend, pressing her, if she regarded the Re-establishment of her Health, to continue those Powders he had sent her, every other Day, and not to acquaint the Apothecary with it, lest he should oppose the only Means by which (if she had any Confidence in him) she should recover. On Sunday Night her Corps was decently interred.

Tuesday Evening, about eight a Clock, a Person walking on the Side Terras in Grey's Inn Gardens, in Company with two Women, was observed by a Gentleman at a small Distance, who imagined he had some Knowledge of them; when he came nearer, being confirmed in his Suspicion, he without any farther Ceremony began to belabour the Spark most severely, telling the People, who by this Time had got round them, that he was a rascally Fellow, and that he would take every Opportunity to seduce his Wife, whom he had for several Days past cohabited with; the Lady and her Confidante, frightened at this unexpected Rencounter, made the best of their Way out of the Gardens, leaving their Gallant prostrate at the Feet of his injured Antagonist.

June 16. On Tuesday last an English Gentleman and his Servant, a Foreigner, came in a Post Chaise, in his Way to Scotland, to an Inn at Stevenage in Hertfordshire. Soon after, two of his Majesty's Messengers arrived at the same Inn, took the Gentleman into Custody, and brought him and his Servant in two Post Chaises to Town, one Messenger in one Chaise with the Gentleman, and the other with his Servant. It is not publickly known who this Person is, no Mention from Authority having yet been made of this Affair.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, dated June 5, O. S.

"Our Court has been a good deal surprised to see the Accounts published in the English and other public Papers, of the Meeting between the King's Ships, under the Command of Monsr. de Salvert, and the English Men of War commanded by Commodore Buckley, upon the Coast of Guiney; in which some Circumstances are insinuated, very different from what passed upon that Occasion. The King's Ships had been at Anchor in the Road of Anamaboa several Days before the English Ships arrived there; soon after which, the French Commandant sent an Officer to Capt. Buckley, with the Compliments which are customary; upon M. de Salverts Answer, Capt. Buckley, and some other Officers went on Board his Ship, where he was received with the usual Honours. That the respective Pretensions of the two Nations, which regard to the Trade carried on upon the Coast of Guiney, was talked of, is true; but if it was only in general Terms, and by way of Conversation; and so far from any Menaces having passed on either Side, that they behaved to each other with the greatest Politeness, and perfectly consistent with the strict Union that subsists between the two Crowns. Some Days after M. de Salvert sailed from Anamaboa, after having received on Board the Deputies sent by the Nation of the Fantins to the India Company, and upon whose Account he had prolonged his Stay in the Road."

An Extract of a Letter from Amsterdam, June 6.

"The most authentick Advices assure us, that nothing is so premature, as what has been inserted in some Gazettes, of the favourable Turn that Affairs are taking in the Conferences at Brussels in regard to the Tariff, which, it is said, was going to be concluded greatly to the Advantage of the Maritime Powers: They indeed allow that Things have hitherto been treated on at this Congress with as much Harmony as one can reasonably expect; but there is really little or nothing done yet, the Plan of Proceedings being but just drawn up; so that the same Difficulties which subsisted at first, yet remain, and, it is apprehended, will not very speedily be removed. The Affair of the Barrier is certainly an Object which merits much Attention, and cannot fail of taking up some Months of the Minister's Time, before it can be regulated in such Manner as one could wish to see it.

"Pretty much the same Thing may be said upon the Report which has been spread of the Convention signed at Madrid, between the Courts of Great-Britain and Spain. This News is looked upon here as very precipitate; seeing our last Letters from Madrid make no Mention of any such Treaty, and those from France seem to insinuate the contrary. As this, however, as it will, our Advices from Madrid tell us, there appears to be the most perfect good Understanding and Friendship between the Courts of Spain, Vienna and London; and that the Ministers are casting out the Means of preventing the Squabbles which so frequently happen between the Subjects of Great-Britain and the Spanish Guarda Costas, under Pretence of contraband Commerce. It's added, that a Convention of this Sort, which will, in Time, regulate every Thing to mutual Satisfaction, is actually upon the Carpet, and is pretty far advanced.

"We hear nothing from Hanover which indicates that the Overture of the grand Negociation which is to be carried on there, has yet been made. We however, are inform'd, from good Hands, that his Britannick Majesty is resolved to leave no Stone unturn'd to accomplish his great Designs before he leaves Germany, whereby he will merit the glorious Title of Father of his Country. Ministers flock from all Parts of Germany to compliment his Britannick Majesty on the Part of the Princes their Masters: But as these Gentlemen, after having done their Duty in that Respect, do not seem in Haste to return home, they are thought to come to Hanover, rather from Motives of Polity than Politeness. This will certainly give his Majesty a better Opportunity of pushing the Negociation with the Princes, their Ministers being present, and acquainted with the Designs of their Masters."

June 13. Between Eleven and Twelve on Monday Night a Foreigner was accosted in the Strand, near the Savoy, by a Streetwalker, who pulled him by the Arm, which obliged him to push her down to get rid of her. She immediately called out Murder and Thieves, which alarming the Watch, the Gentleman thought it most prudent to take to his Heels; but before he had got many Yards, he was knocked down by a Fellow genteely dressed, who took his Handkerchief out of his Pocket, and pretended to the Mob that he had just robbed the Woman of it; upon which he was charged by the Watch, and carried to the Roundhouse. The next Morning he was carried before a Magistrate, where the Prosecutor was to meet him, but his not appearing, and the Gentleman's Behaviour convincing the Justice he had been robbed himself and vilely used, he was discharged. In the Scuffle he lost his Snuff-Box, two Moidores, and a Silk Handkerchief. As he came out of the Justice's, he observed the Woman, who was the Occasion of all this, standing in the Street, upon which he charged a Constable with her, and she was committed to Bridewell, as an idle and disorderly Person.

Not only Lambeth is now crouded with Ladies of the Town, but they have made Hammersmith, and many other Villages, Places of Refuge. In the mean Time, the few Houses of ill Fame which are left open, continue undisturbed; only as their Female Lodgers dare not appear in the Streets at Night, without the Danger of being taken into Custody, they now pick up whom they can in the Day, and meet with their usual Customers at home in the Night.

On Thursday Night between nine and ten, a Gentleman's Servant elevated with Liquor, with a long Lash Whip in his Hand walking through Southampton Buildings, Holbourn, did not scruple to lay it on People that were passing by. This Behaviour of Course gathered a Croud, and when the Footman got to the Grotto Alehouse, the Landlord happened to come out, to whom he gave the Discipline of the Whip as he had done to others. The Landlord being a stout Man, collar'd him directly, kicked up his Heels, and rolled him in the Kennel, to the great Satisfaction of the Spectators. In the Scuffle the Footman lost his Whip, but after it was found he walked off sneakingly amidst the Hisses of the Croud, in the dirty Condition that his Insolence deserved.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, dated June 6.

Matters here, between the Clergy and Parliament, are in a terrible Convulsion. The former is countenanced by the Court, and the latter have the Wellwishes of the People. The worst Things are apprehended from the Fury of these last, Times past have shewn what Length the Parisians have gone in Cases of the like Nature, where Religion has been the Motive of their Dissatisfaction. The King, as a good Father, is very desirous of making his People easy, and of preventing the bad Consequences which are likely to result from these Divisions; but it is very much doubted, whether the Zeal of his Majesty is capable of effecting this: It is an Affair in which People's Consciences are interested, and wherein a Sovereign, when he interposes, very rarely succeeds, whether he makes use of gentle or rigorous Methods.

The Parliament, who know their own Strength, and who never act with Heat when Things come to Extremity, at this Time shew their utmost Grandeur by the majestic Strength with which they make their Remonstrances to the King. His Majesty sees the Solidity of the Reasons offered by this Body, and would yeild to them, but the Clergy have such Influence over this Monarch, that the Parliament can really gain no Ground. Things must needs grow worse and worse, if a Judgment may be formed from the Choice which the King has made of the Prelates, who are to be Part of the Ecclesiastical Council. In the mean Time, external Affairs are neglected, the Ministry having scarcely any Time to reflect thereupon. The Powers who oppose the Measures of this Court take Advantage of these domestick Troubles, which tear the Kingdom in Pieces, and greatly weaken the French Nation.

We hear that most of the Cities of the Kingdom have followed the Example of this Capital; and that the Dissension has every where the same Object for its Motive, which, 'tis said, throws the Court into an extreme Embarrassment, and which may possibly cause the Ministry to find Employment for busy restless Minds, by entering into a new War, which would probably prevent the threatened Consequences of these Divisions, and Parties formed thereupon: For it's an unerring Observation, that the French are never better Subjects, nor more submissive, than when their publick Affairs go ill."

NEWBRN, August 28.

About a Fortnight ago, was committed to Goal in this Town, Four Men, viz. Patrick Moore, a Taylor by Trade, Daniel Johnson, alias Dixon, a Chymist, or Doctor, William Jillet, a Blacksmith, and Peter Matthews; for making bad Money: They were taken by the Sheriff of this County, at Peter Matthews's House, about 30 Miles from this Town, near near to which, in a great Swamp, they had erected a Forge, and prepared Moulds and other Materials for making Doubloons, Piſtoles, Pieces of Eight, and half Piſtereens: There were ſome of the Doubloons, a Piſtole, Pieces of Eight, and half Piſtereens found upon them, but ſo badly done as not to be eaſily impoſed upon any Body; which may be owing to the timely Diſcovery of the Plot, which prevented their finiſhing them in the Manner they intended; for the Similitude as to Size, is very exact, only they are much wanting in Colour, which perhaps was to have been the finiſhing Stroke. Patrick Moore, who upon his Examination, ſeems to give the cleareſt Evidence, ſays, That he liv'd in Virginia, and work'd at his Trade, at the Houſe of one Richard Booker, in Gloceſter County, where the ſaid Daniel Johnſon, alias Dixon, and William Jillet, reſorted; that the ſaid Booker gave him the ſaid Moore a ſmall Boat, with Proviſions ſufficient, to bring the ſaid Johnſon, alias Dixon, and William Jillet, with their Bellows, Hammers, Moulds, and other Materials for making Money, into this Province; which he accordingly did about two Months ſince, and landed them up Neuſe River, from whence they travelled to the Houſe of the ſaid Peter Matthews, as above, ſet up their Forge, and were proceeding to the good Work; and would, in all Probability, have plyed us plentifully with Doubloons, Piſtoles, and Pieces of Eight, had not the Plot been timely diſcovered.

WILLIAMSBURG, October 12.

We hear from the upper Parts of the Country, that the heavy Rains which fell there about a Fortnight ago, have occaſioned the greateſt Freſhes known for many Years, by which very conſiderable Damage has been done to the Land contiguous to the Rivers. —— The Water roſe in many Places, near Thirty Feet perpendicular, carrying away all the Bridges, and many Houſes. —— Several Gentlemen have ſuffer'd very conſiderably by the Loſs of their Tobacco Houſes, and other Damage to their Plantations.
